The Legislative Council is a bipartisan, joint agency of the House and Senate, composed of eight appointed representatives, eight appointed senators, and the leader for each party in the House and Senate. Its staff provides research and printing services to the legislature and its members. The staff provides research on legal, scientific, economic, historical, and other topics at the request of legislators or legislative agencies, or as directed by the Council. It also administers a conference for newly elected legislators and, in conjunction with Sangamon State University, a program of recording oral history from legislators and a program of internships for graduate students. The Council's printing service unit prints calendars showing the progress of bills in each house, conference committee reports, and some other publications for the General Assembly, as well as stationery and some newsletters for individual legislators. It also prints directories, reports, and other major products of the Council research staff.
